

Three Men in a Boat

Last Thursday, Three Men in A Boat was put on at the village hall. A one-man show by Giles Shenton, it was entertaining and went down well with the audience.

It's the first public performance at the hall in over a decade and was organised by Jean Marc Grosfort and John Bradon. The Village Hall committee are keen to see the stage back in use. 35 tickets were sold and, with bar receipts too, the event was more than viable. It is hoped that a further performance can be held next year.

By the way, if you are wondering how Three Men in a Boat is done as a one-man show, you might recall that the book is written as one man's reminiscences of their journey.
